

Living in Sacramento

Sacramento is the capital of California where over 2 million people live and work in the Greater Sacramento region. Sacramento boasts:

- ▶ A lower cost of living than other major metropolitan areas in California.
- ▶ The most ethnically integrated metropolitan area in the country.
- ▶ A wide spectrum of types of businesses and government employers.
- ▶ Easy access to other locations:
 - Two-hours drive to San Francisco, Napa, Tahoe or Yosemite.
 - One hour flight to Los Angeles or San Diego.
 - Wine connoisseurs can visit world-class wineries in the Napa area as well as the Sierra foothills, and skiers have their choice of several mountain ski resorts.
- ▶ "Small-town" feel in a metropolitan area.
- ▶ Mild climate.
- ▶ The Sacramento Kings.

The city is home to numerous restaurants, and a lively arts scene that includes opera, ballet, symphony, theaters, museums and art galleries.

CSU, Sacramento

Located just ten minutes from downtown Sacramento, the river-surrounded CSUS campus offers undergraduate and masters degrees to over 28,000 students. The College of Business serves approximately 4,200 students, including almost 500 students with Finance Concentrations. The Finance Area resides in the College of Business Administration; the area is comprised of 10 full-time and several part-time faculty.

The CBA enjoys the leadership of our new enthusiastic dean, Dr. Sanjay Varshney, who holds a Ph.D. in Finance. New faculty can expect personable, individual interactions with Dean Varshney and a commitment to supporting the academic needs of the CBA faculty.

CSUS is part of the California State University System, the largest and most diverse system in the country, with students of color above 53 percent and 40 percent from households where English is not the main language.

Finance Area

The outstanding quality of the Finance Area in the College of Business is well known to recruiters, corporations, organizations, the academic community and to our large network of prominent alumni. More CBA graduate students declare an MBA/Finance Concentration than any other discipline.

Our finance faculty members combine academic research and real-world experiences to advance our teaching and learning environment. This approach reinforces faculty research and keeps faculty members abreast of changes in corporate practices.

The Finance faculty created a range of courses offering a solid understanding of the fundamental techniques and practices of modern finance. Our curriculum reflects many years of teaching experience and is continuously updated to incorporate the latest financial market developments and important innovations in academic research. New faculty members can choose among the following finance courses or design and develop their own new courses.

- Fundamentals of Financial Management
- Corporate Finance
- Investments
- Security Analysis and Portfolio Management
- Financial Institutions and Markets
- Risk Management and Insurance
- Financial Markets
- Advanced Investment Strategies
